DEMOCRATS CHOOSE O'LEARY AND LILLIBRIDGE FOR REPRESENTATIVES

Councilman William W. O'Leary and third selectman Erroll C. Lillibridge were nominated without opposition for first and second representatives to the general assembly by the democratic caucus in the town hall Tuesday night. The caucus had an attendance of between 20 and 30, of whom six were women, and it finished its business and adjourned at eight minutes.

William H. Callahan, town committee chairman, called the caucus to order and Mr. J. Curran was elected chairman on motion of Cornelius J. Downes.

Mr. Curran reminded the democrats that this was the second time in as many months that they had honored him by inviting him to preside at a party meeting. He also called attention to the fact that next Saturday is the last day on which "to be made" can be made voters and said that less than 25 per cent on the list had so far been made, but that the democrats see to getting the men of their party to appear before the board Saturday so as to be made voters.

Mr. Curran also announced a democratic rally next Saturday when David E. Fitzgerald of New Haven, the party candidate for governor, and Thomas J. Spellacy of Hartford, candidate for U. S. senator, are to be the speakers.

On motion of P. F. Sweeney, Jeremiah J. Desmond was made clerk of the caucus.

NORWICH NAVAL RESERVE ORGANIZATION HAS BEGUN

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 11, the Norwich Naval Reserve met at the state armory in the room of Battery B, 12nd Regiment. The meeting was largely attended by interested young men, and promises an early success for the organization of a healthy and vigorous naval unit for Norwich.

Every detail of the reserve was carefully explained to all present, the whole meeting with unanimous approval which was immediately demonstrated by the volunteers to immediately undergo their physical examinations at the morning base at New London.

Due to lack of transportation it was impossible to take more than five men to the base for examination. Those men were all passed physically and will be enrolled this (Wednesday) evening. Their names are as follows: Rogers, veteran U. S. A.; Munkentrop, veteran U. S. A.; and ex U. S. N.: Lamphere, Lenard and Baker, new enlistments. Transportation will be provided this (Wednesday) evening to the sub-base or the medical examiner will be present.

The naval reserve is a good thing and a big thing. It is good for the young men because it establishes his connection with the greatest navy in the world. It teaches and unfolds to him the great mysteries of the deep, providing an ever interesting study of that ancient and honorable profession, the mariner. He will learn of things that he can never know otherwise, except by actively following the sea. He will have good comrades, a good social organization, sports and competitive games. Knots, signals and signals, radio, machine guns and small arms, big guns, engines and dynamo, boats and ships all go into the making of a man-of-war's man.

Norwich men feel proud of her naval men, realizing that in them she has a real active link with the great American navy. Each year her men may go out and come into contact with the men from other cities and at least prove their equals if not really their superiors in efficiency. The officers are here to teach them. MCLEAN ASKS SPELLACY

IN A statement issued at Hot Springs, Va., this week, U. S. Senator George P. McLean of Connecticut, who has been renominated by the republicans, replied to a recent speech by his democratic opponent in the coming election, Thomas J. Spellacy of Hartford.

Senator McLean's statement was as follows: Mr. Spellacy, in his political creed, declares that "what the people want are facts." He then denounces the new tariff bill as one that cannot be defended, "except by those who are given a license to extort extra profits from the pockets of the people." Some of the highest rates in the bill cover Connecticut industries in common with similar industries in other states. I am sure Mr. Spellacy's constituents would be glad to have him read the law on this point.

When an industry needs protection, it should be accorded it, says Mr. Spellacy then he proceeds to eliminate from the list needing protection those industries that do not vote in Connecticut. Has Mr. Spellacy reached the conclusion that he must repudiate the national platform of his party and condemn its long and disastrous record against protection, or be on the wrong side of the issue that transcends all others in importance so far as Connecticut is concerned, or is he in favor of a tariff for politics only? Would the protection that he believes in extend beyond election day in opposition to his party?

What Are Mr. Spellacy's Plans? Mr. Spellacy touches upon other matters in the published statement of his political creed, but in no instance do I find that he commits himself to anything, where a difference of opinion is possible. Naturally we all want economy and low taxes and international peace? We want to preserve our individual liberties and state and community governments. Just how does Mr. Spellacy propose to improve upon the plans and purposes along this line, which have been adopted by President Harding and the republican congress? What taxes would Mr. Spellacy reduce and get the money required to pay current expenses and interest on the national debt? What would be the party had control of the treasury? Is there anything in the recent record of his party that points to economy in the public service, or decentralization of power? Some of the major reasons for its overwhelming defeat in 1920 were recklessness extravagance, ill-considered taxation and federal interference with business. What Kind of Democrat? In a word, is Mr. Spellacy a Wilson democrat, a Bryan democrat, a Cox democrat, or is he something new in the democratic line? I am sure his constituents would like to know before the 7th of November.

USING BUCKWHEAT COAL

IN STATE CAPITOL FURNACES
More than 1100 tons of domestic size anthracite coal will be released for domestic consumption because of the adoption by state officials of the use of No. 1 buckwheat coal for use in the furnaces at the state capitol at Hartford.

Formerly, domestic sizes of anthracite were used entirely at the capitol, but during the coal shortage incidental to the recent war successful experiments were made with both soft coal and the buckwheat grade. So successful were the trials of the cheaper grade of coal that its permanent use was decided upon.

Large deliveries of No. 1 buckwheat are being made at the present time at the capitol and Thomas W. Russell, state fuel administrator, said today that unlimited quantities of this grade were now available for home consumption. The state fuel commission suggests a mixture of domestic sizes of anthracite with buckwheat coal for domestic use in homes throughout the state. Already large numbers of householders have laid in supplies, and dealers report considerable increase in demand.
